Allison (Ali) Brock grew up in Hawaii, where she was very active in Pony Club, jumped, rode dressage, exercised polo ponies and rode Western. After high school, she moved to the mainland to work with several well-known dressage trainers, including Olympian Sue Blinks. When Sue moved to the West Coast in 2004, Ali took over the head trainer position at Fritz and Claudine Kundrun's DeerMeadow Farm in Keswick, Virginia.

She developed the Kundruns' now-retired Hanoverian stallion Rosevelt from a 6-year-old to a team bronze medalist at the 2016 Rio Olympics. While bringing along her next stars, she continues to be an active clinician and official ambassador for Brooke USA, a nonprofit organization dedicated to improving the welfare of working horses, mules and donkeys around the world.

*This event is open to Open, Amateur, and Young Riders from Training Level to Grand Prix.
Rider application can be found on the HDS website. Selected riders will be notified one month prior to the event.
Rider fees are ZERO thanks to a generous anonymous sponsor.*
